Chief, FBIB

Security of Documents

1. As a result of FBIB becoming more closely integrated with the national intelligence agencies, this branch is in receipt of highly classified documents which should have definite value to the field bureaus from the standpoint of general information as well as specific information with respect to topics which are related to national intelligence requirements.

2. All field bureaus will be provided with copies of these documents. Bureau chiefs are again cautioned to avoid any violation of CIA security regulations with particular reference to the handling and safeguarding of classified documents. However, all personnel who have an operational interest in these documents should be afforded the opportunity to see them, providing they have been fully cleared to receive classified information.
